To the Families We Serve

It is our goal to provide you an incomparable experience that honors your deceased loved one through tributes and services completely unique to your family. We understand you are bereaved and may be bewildered and in shock. In order to assist you through the development of a highly personal funeral experience you will have a team of staff working with you. They want to make a connection with you. They will listen intently to what's important to you and your family. They will commit to following through with the smallest detail, and they will follow up with you to make sure you were satisfied.

Your funeral director, an expert in grief, mourning and bereavement, will help and support you from the first call you make to us through the introduction to our aftercare specialists. Your support team will also include an administrative expert to coordinate services, and complete all necessary forms and funeral stationary, and a service coordinator to make sure all the details of the funeral experience are thoroughly covered and executed.

Ninety percent of our families say we provide a good to excellent value and 97% were very satisfied with their overall experience. It is so important that we serve you at the highest professional level that you will get a survey from an independent consulting firm to assess the services we provide. Please take the time to fill out the survey as we use it monthly to understand the best way to serve our families.

Lastly, I would like to recommend you complete three tasks in order to lessen the intensity of mourning and feel less bereaved. First, witness the deceased where it is most comfortable for you; be it at the place of death, such as the hospital, home or nursing home or somewhere else such as the funeral home. Second have a ceremony that acknowledges your loss, pays tribute to the deceased and honors your faith. Lastly, invite the public. It's good for the community and will be good for you even though you may be anxious about it. Grief is a universal feeling that is best relieved through being with others.

Sincerely,

Scott W. Bradley, MSW, CT
